

M. Matsuyama LAB.

[Science and Technology Communication]

Department of Human and Social Systems

Public Engagement

We are developing science and technology communication methods that foster the ability to choose the future by activities in public relations and regional collaboration.

For example, we have roundtables for researchers and the general public to learn the issues that should be discussed before new technologies enter our society, discuss and share images of future society.

